

EVERYTHING HAPPENS FOR A REASON

We love how fashion houses have been releasing intimate short films and Prada is no exception. Filmed by American director, Wes Anderson, Castello Cavalcant is an eight-minute movie which follows on from last year's collaboration with Roman Polanski. Cinematographed by legendary Darius Khondji who used bright, neon-like acid colours, the setting is in cinecittà and starts off with actor, Jason Schwartzman crashing into a religious figure. What follows is a seemingly spiritual journey with the message that nothing happens without a reason.

COMFORT THROUGH TECHNOLOGY

Flexible, light and soft, the Rockport's chukka boot is made of lightweight shoe materials and designed with a unique architecture that mimics your feet's natural walking motion. Most interestingly, for their entire Fall 2013 collection, Rockport has partnered with Adidas to incorporate the ADIPRENE® by adidas sports technology, a high shock-absorbent cushioning that protects the heel at impact.

IMPECCABLE CRAFTSMANSHIP

Luxury tableware brand Christofle is a master at producing silver home ware and their latest products do not disappoint. Introducing the Marly Vase which has been sculpted in the rococo style and feature acanthus leaves and flowers that has been sandblasted all over the body. Named after a castle built by King Louis XIV, the Marly Vase showcases Christofle's dedication to perfection and quality since its inception in the 19th century.

PODIUM-WORTHY

Since its illustrious debut where track legend, Tommie Smith was accompanied with a pair of Puma Suedes to accept his gold medal at the 1968 Mexico City Track and field events. Since then, this style of footwear has gained an iconic status within the brand, selling millions of pairs through the years. To celebrate one of the brand's signature shoes, the Puma Suede is released within the Since '68 Pack. Featuring gold, silver and bronze, each pair comes in brushed leather, both in distressed metallic form strip and accents.
